At the 2011 reunion in Lancaster, PA, you will enjoy seeing Amish Families living a lifestyle much as it was in the 17th century.

Lancaster County is home to the oldest Amish settlement in the U.S.A. The Amish arrived in Pennsylvania about the same time as our Windemuth ancestors and have preserved their lifestyle much as it was in the 17th century. This will give us the opportunity to see firsthand how our ancestors lived when they arrived in North America.

Neal Wintermute, host of the event, says "Lancaster is a popular destination where visitors can unwind and enjoy a slower pace. One can relax to the clip-clop of horses' hooves echoing down quiet country roads.

Families will enjoy beautiful scenery dotted by one-room schoolhouses, covered bridges, mule teams working the fields and homemade clothes and quilts gently blowing in the breeze."

We will be staying at the Bird-in-Hand Family Inn owned by the Smucker's family. This modern facility has playgrounds and pools for the kids and is adjacent to the Bird-in-Hand Restaurant and Smorgasbord. According to Neal, "Marvelous home cooked food, served family style or as a smorgasbord, is a tradition with the Amish. This will be a reunion to remember."

Planned activities during the reunion will give you the opportunity to catch up on news from distant cousins and meet previously unknown family members. A welcome dinner will start the event on Tuesday; Wednesday we will hold a family meeting and take a group photo; Thursday, we will enjoy an optional coach tour with stops at Hershey's Chocolate World and the Amish community. Thursday evening will be our closing banquet. Page 6 and 7 has more details and the registration form.

During your free time, there is plenty to see and do. Enjoy a buggy ride or a trip on the historic steam powered Strasburg Railroad. The kids will enjoy a trip to Dutch Wonderland Family Amusement Park or the Lancaster Science Factory. For history buffs, Gettysburg is

Georg Philip Windemuth - The Loyalist

Of the four original Windemuth emigrants that arrived in Pennsylvania during the 1730's, only Georg Philip Windemuth moved to Canada. Today, most Canadian Windemuth's (including related spellings) are direct descendants of him. This article examines his life in North America and the reasons for his relocation to the Niagara peninsula of Upper Canada (today known as Ontario).

Georg Philip Windemuth, known as "Philip", was born on May 21, 1705 in Pfungstadt, Hesse, Germany. At age 27, he journeyed to North America on the sailing ship Samuel departing from Rotterdam. The ship, as did every ship sailing from Europe to the British Colonies, made a mandatory stop in England. While in port, each immigrant was required to take an oath of allegiance to the British crown. The ship then continued its six week voyage arriving in Philadelphia on August 11, 1732.

During his time in Philadelphia, Philip married Maria (Mary) Juliana Huber (Hoover) and the couple had their first child Leonard in 1736. That same year, Philip's father Johann Christoph and younger brother Johann Georg arrived from Germany on the ship Harley. The following year, Philip's sister Anna Elizabeth and her husband Johannes Schnauber, arrived completing the family's emigration to the new world.

Sometime before 1746, Philip and Mary moved to Stillwater, Sussex County, New Jersey, perhaps in the company of his brother Johann Georg and other family members. While in Stillwater, three sons, George, Philip and Christopher were born. They removed from Stillwater to neighboring Walpack about 1752 when Philip acquired 114 acres. Their family continued to grow as more children were born; Johannes, Abraham, Peter, Elizabeth and Benjamin. The family moved again in 1764, this time further north, up the east side of the Delaware River to Montague Township. In 1772, Philip purchased 116 acres of land in Pennsylvania, near the Susquehanna River in the Wyoming Valley, and his entire family, with the exception of sons, Leonard and George, moved to their new home.

In 1776, the Continental Congress declared the 13 American Colonies independent of the British crown. In response, people along the frontier began erecting suitable forts "as a defense against the common enemy." In the Wyoming Valley, the Wintermoots (by now, this is how the name was spelled), joined others in building a "blockaded house" which was named Wintermoot Fort. It was commonly believed by neighbors that Wintermoot Fort was for more than just protection against hostilities but also involved activities of loyalty to the British Government. Several more blockaded structures were built further up the valley by Patriots supporting the separation with Great Britain.

By 1778, Britain found itself with insufficient forces in America to conduct traditional military campaigns. This necessitated a change of strategy and they began employing Indians and Tories to carry out a war of desolation on the frontier.

In June of 1778, Major John Butler (of Butler's Rangers fame), with a force consisting of two hundred British Provincials, two hundred Tories and about 700 Indians advanced toward the Wyoming Valley with a mission of "laying waste" to the Patriots living there. On Oh, don't forget shopping. Lancaster has been called the antique capital of the United States. Quality hand-crafted items are in abundance at the unique shops. There are also more than 200 outlet stores offering discount prices on just about everything.

Getting there is easy. Lancaster is located about 20 miles from I-76 on US Hwy 222. If you are flying, consider arriving in Philadelphia or Harrisburg, then renting a car for the hour's drive to Lancaster.

Georg Philip Windemuth

July 1st, the British party arrived and camped directly opposite Wintermoot Fort. The families in the fort invited Major Butler to use it as his headquarters. Butler dispatched a messenger to the other forts requesting their surrender. They declined.

On Friday, July 3rd, the local Patriots, after under estimating the size of Major Butler's forces, decided to attack and drive the British out of the valley. The ensuing battle ended quickly in a massacre with nearly 300 Patriots mutilated and killed by the Indians. Wintermoot Fort was burned by the British to prevent its future use in defending the valley.

After the battle, Philip, his family and other loyalists living at the fort, moved to Ontario. Philip died there in 1779, perhaps in Lincoln County. His widow, Maria Huber, settled near Fort Erie, in Birtie Township, Ontario.

Following the war, England offered Loyalists and their family members 200 acres of land in Canada if they could offer proof that they had fought on the British side during the war. Maria and her sons petitioned and received land along the Niagara River. Her petition stated, "Newark, 15 Feb 1797 - I do hereby certify that Philip Wintermute, deceased, came to Niagara in the Year 1778 with a family consisting of a wife and seven children, six of them sons who all served in Butlers's Rangers, one killed in the service; that the said Philip died in the year 1779; the widow and six children are yet living in the province." It is signed by J. Ball, J.P. & Lieut., late Rangers.

It is interesting to note that while Philip was a Loyalist, his brother's family (Johann Georg Windemuth) and his sister's family (Anna Elizabeth Schnauver) fought for or were sympathetic to the Patriots and remained in the United States. The only child of Philip that stayed in the United States was his oldest son, Leonard who remained in New Jersey.

2010 Reunion Tour in Germany

In August, forty North American Windemuth descendants enjoyed a 10 day coach tour of Germany. The tour visited areas where our ancestors lived in the 17th century, including Pfungstadt, Allendorf, and Kerzenheim. At the end of the tour, the group invited 38 German Windemuth cousins who reside in the area to join them for an international banquet.

A special thanks is extended to Susan Wintermuth, Mike Wintermute, Richard and Hannele Windemuth, Heinz Conti-Windemuth, Herbert and Winifred Neie, and Christian and Brigit Neie for your help in organizing the trip. Your efforts made the tour an exceptional and memorable journey.

Below and on the next page are a few photos from the tour. A diary of the trip along with more pictures, can be found on our web site: www.windemuth.org.

Above: Mike Wintermute, Susan Wintermuth, and Gene Dennis examine parish records at Pfungstadt dating back to 1650. Church member Hans Rothmann is holding the book.

Information Request:

Cynthia Skinner writes: Seeking information for Catherine Wintemute, Humberstone Tsp., Welland County, Ontario. She was the wife of Mahlon Strawn in the early 1800's, mentioned in the 1900 Windemuth book but not in the 1996 Heritage book. My search in the New Jersey and Ontario archives has been a dead end. Internet sites have merged her identity with that of her cousin, also a Catherine Wintermute, the wife of Hiram Strawn and who's parentage is well documented in her father's will. Contact me at: PO Box 231, Jacksonville, AR 72078; phone 501-295-8168.
